CRC CELEBRATES OUR DIFFERENCES IN EQUALITY & DIVERSITY WEEK

Tuesday 3 March 2009

Cambridge Regional College is celebrating “Equality and Diversity” this week, by holding an information stand and providing speakers on request to talk to students.

There will be information provided in the mall area, encouraging students to reflect upon the diverse nature of our community. Speakers are being offered to tutorial groups, to help aid discussions.

Rev Chris Wilson, College Chaplain and Lead on Social Cohesion said, “Promoting equality is not about saying “we are all the same”. It is about saying that we are all equally valued within our college community - regardless of individual differences. Cambridge Regional College understands that in truly valuing all of our students, they are more likely to be both happy and successful in their time studying with the College. Enjoying college life is a key driver of academic achievement: these events help all of our students to do just that”.

The information stand will be in the mall of the Science Park campus until Thursday 5 March. The College is fully committed to equal opportunities and encourages all students to treat others with respect, regardless of their differences. These latest events form part of a programme of multi-faith and commemorative events that the College has organised, which included Eid, Christmas and Holocaust Memorial Day.
